CAROB PRODUCTS

Carob Flour (Powder)

Carob flour (powder) is a natural product obtained by grinding carefully selected carob fruits through appropriate production processes. As Carob Türkiye, we produce and supply carob flour for wholesale and export demands. Thanks to its finely ground structure, it can be used as a raw material in different food and production applications. The grinding fineness and packaging options of the product can be evaluated according to customer needs. Raw materials obtained from Turkey's carob production regions are selected and processed according to quality criteria. We provide regular and reliable supply for food producers, distributors and businesses at home and abroad. For bulk orders, product quantity, packaging and shipping options can be planned according to demand.

How Do We Produce?

Carob powder; It is obtained by passing carefully selected carob fruits through controlled processes such as cleaning, drying, crushing, grinding and screening. At every stage of the production process, the physical properties of the raw material and the quality standards of the final product are taken into account. This process, which extends from production to packaging, ensures that carob is transformed into a homogeneous and easily processable powder form suitable for industrial use.

Carob powder is obtained by passing carefully selected quality carob fruits through controlled production stages. At every stage of our production process, importance is given to preserving the natural structure of the product and obtaining a homogeneous end product. The production process begins with the selection of carob fruits that have reached the appropriate maturity and meet our quality criteria. Raw material; It is checked for appearance, ripeness, cleanliness and physical quality. Selected carob fruits are separated from foreign substances and elements that may negatively affect the production process before being put into production. The fruits are made suitable for subsequent processes and transferred to the production line. Carob fruits are passed through a controlled drying stage in order to reach the moisture level suitable for processing. This stage is important for the grinding process to be efficient and for the powder obtained to have the desired physical properties.

Dried carob fruits are crushed in a controlled manner and then taken to the grinding process. As a result of grinding, the carob fruit is transformed into a homogeneous powder form with a fineness suitable for its intended use. The product obtained after grinding is sieved to ensure the appropriate particle size. At this stage, the product is checked for its physical properties and the carob powder that meets the specified quality criteria is passed to the packaging stage. The carob powder, whose quality control is completed, is filled into 25 kg kraft paper sacks in accordance with industrial use and export needs. The sacks are securely closed and the product is prepared for shipment.

The packaged products are stacked regularly under warehouse conditions and made ready for shipment. Thus, the entire process from production to packaging is completed and carob powder is delivered to our customers for use in different sectors.

Care is taken to maintain appropriate conditions during the storage and shipment processes of the products. Each packaged batch is prepared in accordance with the order and intended use and presented for shipment through a secure logistics process. Flexible solutions are provided in line with product features and packaging options for the needs of different sectors.

As Carob Türkiye, we carry out the process from the processing of carob raw materials to the packaging of the final product with a controlled and systematic production approach; We offer high quality carob products from Turkey to world markets. We aim to create sustainable, reliable and long-term supply relationships by continuously improving our production processes.
